

Home Start Ceramics Workshop

ulster.ac.uk

Ulster University's Michael Moore, Reader in Fine and Applied Arts Ceramics and the Community Engagement Team are now offering a brand-new series of remote Ceramic Workshops delivered to the home.

A series of sessions to introduce hand built ceramic techniques will take place through live, online demonstrations and workshops. All demonstrations and workshops will be supported by power point presentations to enable participants access the course at a time suitable to them.

- This programme is designed for absolute beginners or those with experience of working with clay.
- One live online session will be provided each (4) week and one follow up tutorial.
- The Home Start Ceramics Team will distribute starter kits with the materials provided, by post to each participant.

The programme is intended to be both fun and educational and will provide participants with their first step into learning the true potential of the craft of handmade Ceramics; from the home.

To ensure each participant has full access to the Home Start Ceramics team the course is limited to a maximum of 8 participants.

Digital broadband or wifi and laptop or tablet are essential to participate in the Workshop.

Home Start Ceramics Workshop

ulster.ac.uk

Ulster University's Michael Moore, Reader in Fine and Applied Arts Ceramics and the Community Engagement Team are now offering a brand-new series of remote Ceramic Workshops delivered to the home.

A series of sessions to introduce hand built ceramic techniques will take place through live, online demonstrations and workshops. All demonstrations and workshops will be supported by power point presentations to enable participants access the course at a time suitable to them.

- This programme is designed for absolute beginners or those with experience of working with clay.
- One live online session will be provided each (4) week and one follow up tutorial.
- The Home Start Ceramics Team will distribute starter kits with the materials provided, by post to each participant.

The programme is intended to be both fun and educational and will provide participants with their first step into learning the true potential of the craft of handmade Ceramics; from the home.

To ensure each participant has full access to the Home Start Ceramics team the course is limited to a maximum of 8 participants.

Digital broadband or wifi and laptop or tablet are essential to participate in the Workshop.