Dear Mr McGowan,

Re: Reviewer of the Month for Nurse Education in Practice journal

Nurse Education in Practice relies on effective peer review processes not only to uphold the quality and validity of individual articles, but also the overall integrity of the journal. We understand that all reviewers assist us in the spare time, and for this we are indebted to each reviewer.

However, every so often, one reviewer stands out amongst the rest for returning a thorough, considered and well organised review, which not only is of great help to the Editor, but more importantly it provides a solid foundation upon which an author may revise their manuscript, or take a review forward to strengthen their onward writing skills.

The Editorial team at NEP acknowledge such reviewers on a monthly basis on the journal's homepage to recognise the valuable contribution that they make to the development of academic papers and to scholarship in nursing education. I am delighted to inform that you have been awarded one of our "Reviewers of the Month" for October.

May I take this opportunity to thank you for your support, and for your contribution to the Journal. Your assistance is much appreciated both by the Editors and Elsevier.

Yours sincerely,

Emily Cooper
